Motivation, Executive Teamwork and Facilitation

The academy has a pool of consultants that span the entire corporate spectrum, including but not limited to Motivational Speaking, Facilitation and Strategic Design and Annual Reporting.

Teamwork & Motivational Speaking

Whilst motivational speaking is used to set the tone of a workshop or meeting, often the need arises in business to increase the morale of an executive or operational team.

An executive management team is core to the success of company or organisation. Each of its executives are a cog in the wheel of success. Conversely, the same team, if not in sync, could be a recipe for disaster. Our model brings individuals together to discover their purpose and that of their colleagues. Teamwork days can be designed for the specific purpose and team problems based on a briefing session and team leader interviews. Such days are designed with relevance to cause bonding and will be different for a sales team than it would for an introverted management team.

Our motivational speaking is based on real life situations, teamwork psychology, personality, expression and exercises designed to cause life-changing thought. The motivational session is usually one hour depending on the management brief. This team of experts is led by an expert in executive coaching and development.

Facilitation

With over a decade of experience in developing strategies for organisations with budgets exceeding 1 billion Rand per annum, our facilitators come with a wealth of knowledge and understanding of the executive and operational environment, understanding corporate politics. Our facilitation techniques unpack and repackage strategies that are well informed by good research and innovation. We understand that each role-player is important and has her/his place in the team. Equally so Annual reports can be seen a nightmare, however if well facilitated will deliver a team view on the performance of the company or organisation.
